About this container

The 12.2m (40ft) long 67m³ opentop is one of the more common types of "special" container used in the shipping industry.

It is used primarily for the shipment of over height or large bulk item cargoes (such as machinery) that are unable to be loaded through normal container doors.

A common use in the domestic markets is for them to be used to handle and transport bulk granular cargo such as grains, wood chips and rock/ore.

Cargo is normally loaded through the roof once the tarpaulin and roof bows have been removed, or alternatively swung in through the doors once the rear top rail is removed.

Pricing of used containers varies according to grade and market supply parameters.

Boxman containers

The vast majority of Boxman used containers are still perfectly serviceable, they have simply been retired out of shipping through the natural renewal cycle that occurs in the shipping industry.

At Boxman we believe our best attribute is providing value for money in matching our customers with the container that best suits their overall needs, taking into account budget, timing and any specific requirements.

At Boxman we strive to purchase the best quality containers we can. Consequently, since we began operations in 1990, Boxman has garnered a reputation for supplying the highest quality second hand container equipment available in the used market.

We offer a refurbishment service, whereby B through to A grade equipment can be cleaned down and repainted according to the customers requirements.

Container features

Unless requested differently, all Boxman used containers are full weatherproof, vermin proof and lockable, providing the best possible security for your goods.
